Prince Ferdinand's Head Quarters at Buhne, September 9.

ON the 5th paſt, a very conſiderable Body of the Enemy, amounting to Twenty Thouſand Men and upwards, attempted to make a general Forage in the Neighbourhood of Geiſmar. But Prince Ferdinand, having received previous Intelligence of their Deſign, croſſed the Dymel early in the Morning of that Day, and went in Perſon, with a Corps of Troops, to oppoſe them; and, though his Serene Highneſs was much Inferior in Number to the French, yet he took his Precautions ſo well, by occupying ſome advantageous Heighths, and placing Artillery there, that he rendered the Enemy's Attempt totally ineffectual, notwithſtanding a large Part of their Army was in Motion to cover the Foragers. On the Morning of that Day likewiſe, the Hereditary Prince, (upon Intelligence that the Voluntiers of Clermont and Dauphiné, conſiſting, each, when compleat, of Six-Hundred Horſe, and Six Hundred Foot, were cantoned at Zierenberg, and from the very ſmall Diſtance of the French Camp at Dierenberg, thought themſelves in perfect Security) went from his Camp at Warbourg to Maltzberg, which is not much more than a League from Zierenberg, without ſeeing any of their Poſts, or meeting any of their Patroles. This made his Serene Highneſs reſolve on an Attempt to ſurprize them; for which Purpoſe, he ordered five Battalions, a Detachment of One Hundred and Fifty Highlanders under the Command of Captain M'Leon, and eight Squadrons of Dragoons, to be ready to march at Eight at Night. They left their Tents ſtanding, and paſſed the Dymel near Warbourg; Maxwell's Battalion of Grenadiers, the Detachment of Highlanders, and Kingſley's Regiment, forming the Head of the Column. Theſe were followed by two other Battalions of Grenadiers, and by Block's Regiment. The eight Squadrons of Dragoons were Bock's, the Greys, and Iniſkillings. At the Village of Witzen, about a League on the other Side of the Dymel, we found all the Light Troops, which were under Major Bulow's Command, and whoſe Deſtination was to turn the Town of Zierenberg, and to take Poſt between it and Durenberg, in order to intercept whoever ſhould attempt paſſing to the Enemy's Camp. At the Entrance of a large Wood, near Maltzberg, the Greys and Iniſkilling's were poſted. At Maltzberg, a Battalion of Grenadiers: The other Battalion of Grenadiers, the Regiment of Block, and Bock's Dragoons, were poſted at proper Diſtances between Maltzberg and Zierenberg, to cover us, in Caſe we had been repulſed and purſued. At a Mill, about two Engliſh Miles from the Town, and within Sight of the Fires of the Enemy's grand Guards, Maxwell's Grenadiers took one Road, Kingſley's Regiment and the Detachment of Highlanders another. When we came within leſs than half a Mile of the Town, the Vedettes of their grand Guard challenged us, but did not puſh forward to reconnoitre us: Our Men marched in the moſt profound Silence. In a few Minutes, we ſaw the Fires of their Piquets, which they had poſted cloſe to the Town. The Noiſe of our Trampling over Gardens gave them the Alarm, and they began to fire; upon which our Grenadiers, who had marched with unloaded Firelocks, (as had been agreed on) ran on towards the Town, puſhed the Piquets, and, having killed the Guard at the Gate, ruſhed into the Town, and drove every Thing before them. Never was a more compleat Surprize. The Attack was ſo ſudden, that the Enemy had not Time to get together in any Numbers, but began to fire at us from the Windows; upon which our Men ruſhed into the Houſes, and, for ſome Time, made a ſevere Uſe of their Bayonets. They afterwards loaded, and killed a great many of the Enemy, who had mounted their Horſes. It was about Two in the Morning, when we got into the Town, and about Three, the Prince ordered the Retreat, after we had taken M. de Norman, Brigadier, who commanded the Voluntiers of Dauphiné, and M. de Comeiras, Colonel of thoſe of Clermont, with about Forty more Officers, and Three Hundred private Men. The Number of killed and wounded is very conſiderable, from an ill-judged Reſiſtance of thoſe who were in the Houſes; but, in Juſtice to our Men, it muſt be ſaid, that they gave Quarter to all who aſked it; and there are ſeveral noble Inſtances of their refuſing to take Money from their Priſoners, who offered them their Purſes. General Griffin, who went into the Town with the Prince by another Gate, at the Head of Kingſley's Regiment, received a Thruſt in the Breaſt with a Bayonet (as is ſuppoſed) from one of our own People, upon hearing him talk French to a Soldier whom he had ſeized, and who would not quit his Firelock; but the Wound is a very ſlight one. What makes this Affair more ſatisfactory is, that it has not coſt us Ten Men, which is wonderful in a Night-Attack, where we might have expected to have loſt more by our own miſtaking Friends for Foes. The Behaviour of the Officers, and the Bravery of the Troops, upon this Occaſion, deſerve the greateſt Commendation. Lord George Lenox was a Voluntier in this Expedition, dition, and had his Horſe wounded under him by a Shot from a Window. With our Priſoners we brought off Two Pieces of Cannon; and, had we had Time to ſearch the Houſes, the Number of our Priſoners would have been doubled; but, as Day was coming on, and we might have been cut off from Warbourg, we returned the ſame Way we came, and arrived there at Eight in the Morning of the 6th, without being at all moleſted.

We have Accounts, that the Duke of Wirtemberg, with his Troops, is retiring, with great Precipitation, from the Frontiers of Brunſwick towards Saxony.

Admiralty Office, Sept. 16, 1760.

Sir Edward Hawke, by a Letter dated the 5th Inſtant, gives an Account, that the preceding Day he had ſent Lord Howe in the Magnanime, with the Prince Frederick and Bedford, to attack a Fort on the Iſle Dumet, which ſurrendered very ſoon after the Prince Frederick and Bedford had been placed againſt it.

There were Nine Cannon of 18 and 22 Pounders found in the Fort, and it was garriſoned by One Company of the Regiment of Bourbon, conſiſting of Fifty-four Men; of which Two were killed and Six wounded in the Attack.

His Majeſty's Ships received no other Hurt, than One Shot through the Bedford's Mizen-Maſt.
